Description

This course surveys federal and state laws regulating consumer purchases and finance. After completing the course, you should have a general understanding of consumer law (including sources of law, scope of coverage, enforcement mechanisms, and available remedies). The problem-solving approach is intended to develop practical skills for advising and representing clients in consumer transactions and disputes.

Materials

Katherine Porter, Modern Consumer Law (Aspen 2016) (“Casebook”)

The course website, emfink.net/ConsumerProtection, has subject outlines, visual aids, practice problems, and links to statutes and other resources.

Policies

Grading

Your final grade for the course will be based on written problem assignments (60%) and in-class performance (40%). There will be no final exam for this course.

The in-class performance component depends on your preparation before class (completing all assigned reading and reviewing problems), regular and prompt class attendance, and constructive engagement during class. Elon Law School’s standards and ABA guidance for awarding course credit assume at least two hours of out-of-class student work for each hour of classroom instruction.

Attendance

Elon Law School has adopted the following attendance policy for all courses:

The Law School administers a policy that a student maintain regular and punctual class attendance in all courses in which the student is registered, including externships, clinical courses, or simulation courses. Faculty members will give students written notice of their attendance policies before or during the first week of class. These policies may include, but are not limited to: treating late arrivals, early departures, and/or lack of preparation as absences; imposing grade or point reductions for absences, including assigning a failing grade or involuntarily withdrawing a student from the class; and any other policies that a professor deems appropriate to create a rigorous and professional classroom environment.

In case of illness or emergency, students may contact the Office of Student and Professional Life, which will then notify the student's instructors. A student may notify the faculty member directly of a planned absence and should refer to individual faculty members regarding any policy that may apply. In the case of prolonged illness or incapacity, the student should contact the Office of Student and Professional Life.

Excessive absences (more than 2 classes) may result in a reduction of your grade.
